

Barack Obama or Hillary Clinton a New President for the Democrats?

So, another election year is upon us and guess what... We're deciding between a black man and a white woman. Either decision will result in the potential for "something new" in the Whitehouse.

But you have to ask yourself... Are they really going to be any different? After all, WHAT makes these candidates so different from the past presidents? Well, we've already established that...

RACE & GENDER

If you could choose two candidates that don't fit the "presidential mold" then a black man and a woman are about as different (in appearance) as you can get. But at the core... Obama, a straight black man, and Clinton, a gay white woman, think very much the same... They both think "WHITE MAN".

Remember, Obama is not black. He is 50% black. So, if 50% black makes him black then 50% white makes him white. So, if you're saying he is a "black man" running for president. You can use the exact same logic to say he is a "white man" running for president. In fact, Obama's main influence growing up was his WHITE mother. He was raised in a white household by a white parent.

Remember, Hillary is not a lady. Sure, she is genetically a female but she thinks male. She has male drive, male goals, and if you watch her on the stump – male emotion. In fact, rumors that Hillary Clinton is gay have been circulating long before her presidential campaign. See here and here and here.

- Obama, LOOKS black but thinks WHITE; looks MALE and thinks MALE.

- Clinton LOOKS white and thinks WHITE; looks FEMALE but thinks MALE.

So they both think WHITE MALE even though neither of them have that appearance.

The difference IS only skin deep. So, as we try to pretend that this is a new breakthrough in the Whitehouse and that this is not just another election of a WHITE MALE we should be ashamed of ourselves. Yes, it is politics as usual in Washington.
